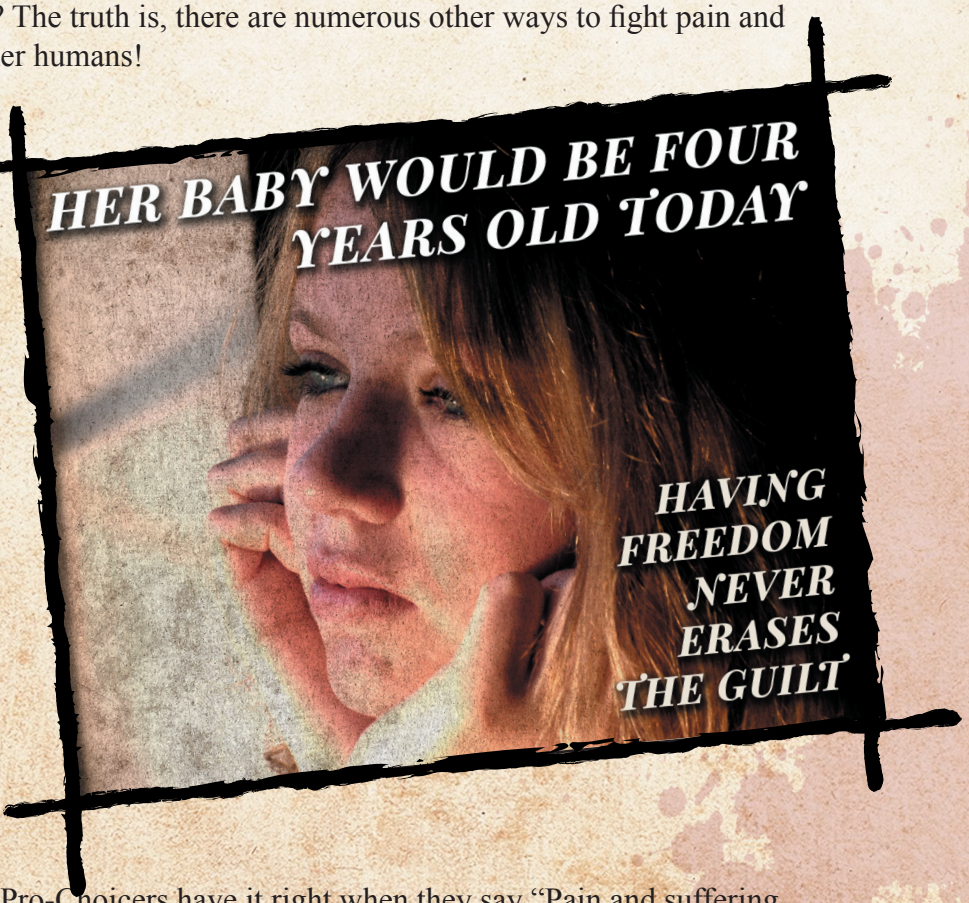
LIE: ABORTION STOPS THE PAIN

For Pro-Choicers, abortion is not the murder of a human being; it's a mercy. Pro-Choicers actually believe that it is a "mercy" to terminate a baby before they even get a chance at life. It is the same philosophy behind euthanasia (i.e. it is a "mercy" to end suffering and pain in the life of an individual; therefore, they terminate the individual).

Question: Is the only way to end pain and suffering in the world is to take peoples' lives from them? Answer: it is not. That's the kind of sick reasoning a serial killer uses to continue murdering his victims. Is that the "mercy" that people like to show others? The truth is, there are numerous other ways to fight pain and suffering without resorting to murdering other humans!

Consider this illustration: a man is driving down the freeway and gets into a serious head-on collision. His head crashed through the windshield and shards of glass embedded themselves into his skull. He was, however, still alive in the hospital. Rather than suffer through the pain and the surgeries of face-reconstruction, what if he decided to decapitate himself to relieve his pain? Would that be better than actually going through the surgeries and enduring all the pain that would go with it? I think not. But, according to Pro-Choicers, that is the best thing he could do. Pro-Choicers say: "When you're in pain, stop it at all costs!", "Before a baby comes into an abusive and poverty stricken world: kill it off", "Before your loved one dies of cancer, kill him off!"



These are philosophies of death; not life. Pro-Choicers have it right when they say "Pain and suffering is wrong". But they get it wrong when they kill the very individual that they are supposed to be having sympathy for. Christians, too, agree that pain and suffering are wrong. But we are not willing to sniper people in the head to protect them from the evils of the world.

Are Pro-Choicers really that naïve to think that they are going to stop pain and suffering in the world for people? Unfortunately, on this side of Genesis 3 (which Pro-Choicers don't believe really happened) there will be pain and suffering. Murdering people is not the way to stop pain and suffering. For example, every Pro-Choicer has pain and suffering in their own lives—so, should they all just put a bullet in their mouth?

Mankind is the problem for all the sin we see. We have it in us (yes, even the Pro-Choicers) to sin and hurt others. We are the problem–and so is everyone else. We are all messed up inside; it's called sin. And sin causes a lot of pain and suffering. Humans are so messed up that they try to fix the problem (a baby out of wedlock) and only compound it by another problem (murdering the baby). That's the kind of sin humans deal with. That's the kind of "problem solving" humans are good at.
